Hi everyone,

This week we had a closer look at refactoring. Doing refactoring on a regular basis is essential to ensure an appropriate code quality as well as maintainability. That's why we already implemented a workflow a few weeks ago which aims to invest a few hours in refactoring every week. This week we were asked to refactor java code that was not written by us. Our Git repositories can be found here:

Further progress

In addition to this refactoring task we of course worked on our use cases. This week we finished the functionality to invite other app users to events and to accept/decline pending invitations. The following screenshot shows an event for which two invitations are pending.

More screenshots will follow once the corresponding UI has been thoroughly reworked.

Best regards
